

US Army Corps of Engineers®

BIOGRAPHY

LTC DAVID A. DIEHL

Deputy Commander, U.S. Army Engineering and Support Center, Huntsville

---

Lt. Col. David A. Diehl is the deputy commander of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Engineering and Support Center, Huntsville, Ala. Lt. Col. Diehl graduated from the West Virginia University with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering. He also holds a master's degree in business administration from the University of South Carolina. He was commissioned through the Reserve Officer Training Corps in 1986.

His recent assignments include G-1 for Gulf Region Division Iraq; project manager for the Far East District in Seoul, South Korea; and deputy commander for the Charleston District, all with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Troop assignments include serving as platoon leader and executive officer for the 42nd Engineer Company, Berlin Brigade in Berlin, Germany; Logistics S-4 officer, of the 44th Engineer Battalion in the Republic of Korea; company commander of Headquarters and Support Company, 864th Engineer Battalion (Combat) (Heavy) at Fort Lewis, Wash.; company commander for Alpha Company, 249th Engineer Battalion (Prime Power) at Fort Lewis, Wash.; and operations officer, S-3, for 1st Battalion, 345th Engineer Regiment (Training Support Battalion) at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Lt. Col. Diehl's awards and decorations include the Bronze Star, Meritorious Service Medal (3 awards), Army Commendation Medal (3 awards), Humanitarian Service Medal, and Army Occupation Medal. He is also a recipient of the Army Engineer Association's Bronze DeFleury Medal.